God has a reason for everything that was written in the Bible, whether to encourage exhort or condemn. When God speaks man is to listen, understand and obey, but often time man skips or rejects the Word of God.

There are those who are rejecting God’s Word by claiming that one cannot fall away from God once in a right relationship with him. If that were the case then God wrote us something that make no sense and cannot be true! If it is impossible to be removed from God then this would be an empty warning.

So in reading these words from God we must understand that one can fall, otherwise God has given us something useless. This is where understanding or reasoning comes into play when studying God’s word. Either we have something useless (if one cannot fall) or we have a direct warning that one can and does fall away.

Let us take heed of this warning and never become that individual “that thinkth he standth.” Meaning we never remove ourselves from the word of God or thinking that we can do things without God in our lives. Remember the admonish Paul wrote about himself, “But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway” (1 Cor. 9:27).

No Tools

Recently I had a package that said "no tools" were needed to use this product. This was found on the front side. However, when you read the information on the backside it listed "tools required." At least one tool was needed. The "no tools" needed contradicted the "tools required" statement on the back. Which one should you believe? One thing is for sure. You know both statements cannot be true. It makes you wonder if you can trust the product to work if they don't know if tools are needed or not.

What if the Bible were that way? That is, what if it contained contradictions? We wouldn't know whether to believe it or not!

Many opponents of the Word of God would like for us to believe that there is not just one contradiction in the Bible but that it is full of them. Is that true? Absolutely not!

The Bible makes the claim to be truth (John 17:17), not just partial truth but absolute truth. If it is truth it cannot contradict itself. It does not say one thing on one page and contradict itself on the following page.

The Bible makes the claim of inspiration (2 Timothy 3:16). If it is inspired then it must come from the mind of God (1 Corinthians 2:10-13). If God is all knowing then He will not make the mistake of contradicting Himself. If the Bible were merely a product of man then it could contain contradictions.

The Bible makes the claim of trustworthiness. It does this through the plea to believe (John 14:1; 12:48). If we cannot trust the entire Bible then we cannot trust any of it. It's an all or nothing proposition!

Will you believe and obey the Book? Man may leave you wondering whether you need tools or not but the Word of God will guide you (Psalm 119:105) to heaven.
